About this piece

E. W. Godwin in the style of

An Aesthetic Movement oak bedroom or side chair with circular turned finials and a row of three turnings to the upper backrest with square cross supports below. Just above where the back leg meets the original rush seat is a subtle turned detail, which sits above the exaggerated curve to the back legs. The back legs are then united to the front with six shaped stretchers.

This chair has a close relationship to E. W. Godwin's side chairs he designed for William Watt.
