About this piece

An oak Arts and Crafts Manxman Piano designed by M H Baillie Scott and made by John Broadwood. John Broadwood were the best British piano makers of the period in the UK. It is in wonderful original condition. A unique concurs example with original finish and hand formed iron wrap round hinges and little ring pull handle. The top folds back and over and then can be hitched open which allows more sound out when played if required. The twin doors opening to reveal the piano keys and two stylised floral craftsman hand formed steel and copper sculptured candle sconces. The movement has been totally refurbished by the previous owner and it is probably one of the very best example's of this type of piano to come onto the market. Height 46", Depth 26", Length 56". Circa 1890's.
